MPRI Interactive Media Scholarship, 2008-2009 The School of Media Arts and Design James Madison University

MPRI, a communications company in northern Virginia, established a scholarship for outstanding undergraduate student scholars majoring in the JMU School of Media Arts & Design with a concentration in Interactive Media. In 2008 a $1,000 scholarship will be awarded to a SMAD major in the Interactive Media concentration based on commitment to new and interactive media, financial need and academic achievement. Students are eligible to apply toward the end of their sophomore or junior year.

Applicants are expected to have a minimum 2.75 overall grade point average. The selection committee may interview finalists for the awards. Students must have a current FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) on record with the JMU Financial Aid Office. Please go to <http://www.jmu.edu/finaid/> for further information.
